OF OLD NAVY, LLC

----- X

AMENDED COUNTERCLAIMS

Preliminary Statement

1. Old Navy seeks damages and other relief based on the breach by L-7 Designs, by and through its representatives Todd Oldham and Todd Oldham Studio, of a Creative Services Agreement dated September 21, 2007 between Old Navy and L-7 Designs (the "Agreement"). Old Navy also seeks a declaration that L-7 Designs breached the Agreement and that Old Navy acted properly and in accordance with the Agreement.

2. Under the Agreement, L-7 Designs committed that its President, Todd Oldham, and Todd Oldham Studio would "provide services as the Design Creative Director for Old Navy." Agreement, Scope of Work § 1.

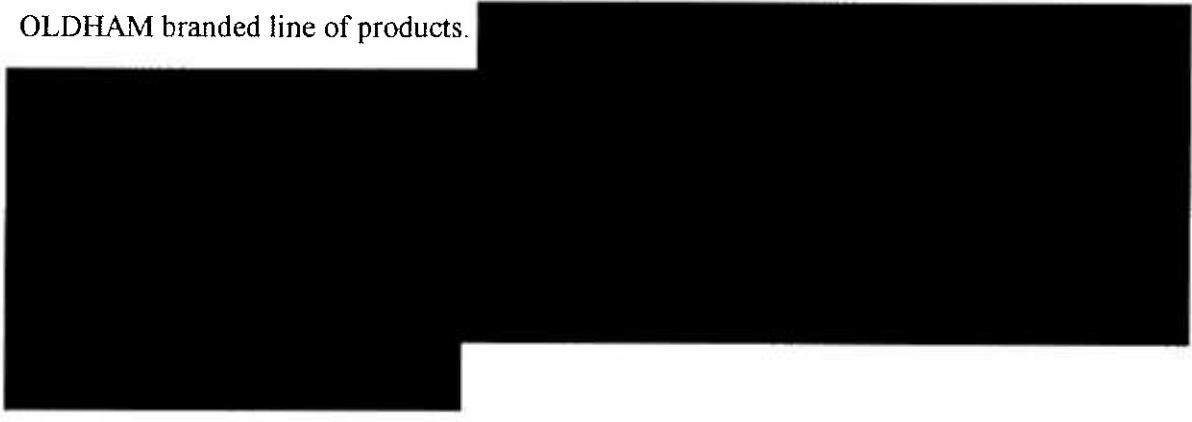

3. The Agreement further required that Mr. Oldham:

4. After only several months on the job, however, Mr. Oldham began neglecting his obligations and the obligations of L-7 Designs under the Agreement. Mr. Oldham's involvement with Old Navy became fleeting, episodic and perfunctory. His performance lacked vision, insight or passion. Mr. Oldham failed to provide any meaningful input on design processes and procedures and failed to provide the guidance, direction and effort required under the Agreement.

5. Rather than performing his obligations and the obligations of L-7 Designs, Mr. Oldham instead devoted his energy and attention to pressing Old Navy to launch a TODD OLDHAM branded line of products.

6. Despite extensive good faith efforts by Old Navy to negotiate an acceptable agreement, the parties were unable to agree on terms for a launch of the proposed line. Among the stumbling blocks were: (i) the insistence by Mr. Oldham and his representatives that the proposed line be pursued during a time of substantial uncertainty in the business climate; (ii) repeated demands by Mr. Oldham and his representatives for "minimum guaranteed" payments –

(iii) repeated threats by Mr. Oldham and his representatives to file a lawsuit if

Old Navy did not capitulate to their demands; and (iv) other outrageous terms, wildly shifting positions, and pressure tactics pursued by Mr. Oldham and his representatives.

7. During this process, it became clear that Mr. Oldham and L-7 Designs were not negotiating in good faith and were acting in a manner that was flatly inconsistent with the collaborative partnership essential to the success of the proposed line.

8. On February 17, 2009, L-7 Designs took further action inconsistent with its contractual obligations by filing this baseless lawsuit against Old Navy. In addition to the prior failures by Mr. Oldham and L-7 Designs to meet their obligations under the Agreement, the filing of a lawsuit against Old Navy violated and rendered it impossible for L-7 Designs and Mr. Oldham to perform their contractual obligations, including to “motivate, inspire, coach and share vision” with Old Navy, provide the meaningful input and other contributions to Old Navy required under the Agreement, and to develop and express Old Navy’s creative point of view internally and externally, including in public relations activities.

Parties

9. Old Navy is a Delaware limited liability company with its principal place of business at 550 Terry Francois Boulevard, San Francisco, California 94158.

10. Upon information and belief, L-7 Designs, Inc. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Texas, with a principal place of business at 20 Vesey Street, Suite 200, New York, New York 10007.

11. Todd Oldham signed the Agreement on behalf of L-7 Designs and upon information and belief is the President of L-7 Designs. Upon information and belief, Todd Oldham Studio is an affiliate, subsidiary, division or related entity of L-7 Designs.

The Creative Services Agreement

12. In or about June 2007, Mr. Oldham's agent, Vital Vayness, contacted Old Navy to inquire whether Old Navy might be interested in working with Mr. Oldham. Mr. Vayness informed Old Navy that Mr. Oldham admired the Old Navy brand and would like to explore possible arrangements to work with Old Navy.

13. Old Navy was receptive to Mr. Oldham's expressed interest in its business, and discussions began about a possible role for Mr. Oldham. Although Old Navy proposed that Mr. Oldham become an employee of Old Navy, Mr. Oldham rejected this suggestion. It ultimately was agreed that Mr. Oldham and his design studio would be engaged, in the capacity of an independent contractor, as Old Navy's Design Creative Director. The arrangement between the parties was set forth in a Creative Services Agreement and Scope of Work ("SOW") incorporated therein, entered into between Old Navy and L-7 Designs as of September 21, 2007 (the "Agreement").

Terms of the Agreement

14. Under the Agreement, Old Navy agreed to provide L-7 Designs with compensation that included:

in connection with services provided under the Agreement. Id.

15. Under the Agreement, L-7 Designs committed that Todd Oldham and Todd Oldham Studio would "provide services as the Design Creative Director for Old Navy." Agreement, Scope of Work § 1. The Agreement required that Mr. Oldham [REDACTED]

16. The Agreement further required that Mr. Oldham:

17. The contractual responsibilities of L-7 Designs had important business implications for Old Navy. Old Navy and its designers relied on Mr. Oldham to provide the creative guidance critical to creating Old Navy's core fashion products, and Mr. Oldham was expressly obligated to provide input to the team at critical points in the design process.

Breach of the Agreement by L-7 Designs

18. L-7 Designs failed to meet its contractual obligations. Although Mr. Oldham initially engaged with Old Navy and its design team, after he had been in his position approximately six months, Mr. Oldham became disengaged and his performance began seriously to decline. Mr. Oldham arrived for meetings unprepared and provided only superficial contributions to the Old Navy creative team. He failed to motivate, inspire or coach the design team and ceased to have any meaningful involvement in the process of initiating, developing, modifying and finalizing the design collections. Instead of inspiring and directing the design development process at kick-off and seeing the collections through to completion, he offered perfunctory suggestions and made no meaningful contributions to the process. Mr. Oldham's performance as Design Creative Director deteriorated to the point of being nearly non-existent, and he failed to deliver the services expressly required by the Agreement.

19. For example, in or about April 2008, Mr. Oldham failed to develop initial creative concepts or otherwise direct the creative design development process for the upcoming collection cycle. Instead, Mr. Oldham sent a box of materials to Old Navy's office that left Old Navy personnel in disbelief and without any direction or guidance. He was unprepared for meetings and did not provide any meaningful input during the design process. Old Navy personnel were forced to develop the design concept and processes for the cycle without any meaningful direction or participation from Mr. Oldham. Mr. Oldham failed to meet his obligations to work with the Old Navy creative team, assist the team and guide team members as they developed, modified and finalized the collections.

20. In or about September 2008, Mr. Oldham again failed to motivate, inspire or coach the Old Navy design team as it began work on the collection cycle. Instead of presenting initial creative concepts and direction to the team, Mr. Oldham met with a single senior designer briefly in the Old Navy cafeteria, and provided him with a handful of photocopied images. The images were useless and clearly had been thrown together quickly and without any genuine effort. Mr. Oldham obviously was unprepared and provided no vision or inspiration. Mr. Oldham neglected his obligations to work with the Old Navy creative team throughout the collection cycle, and again failed to assist the team and guide team members as they developed, modified and finalized the collections.

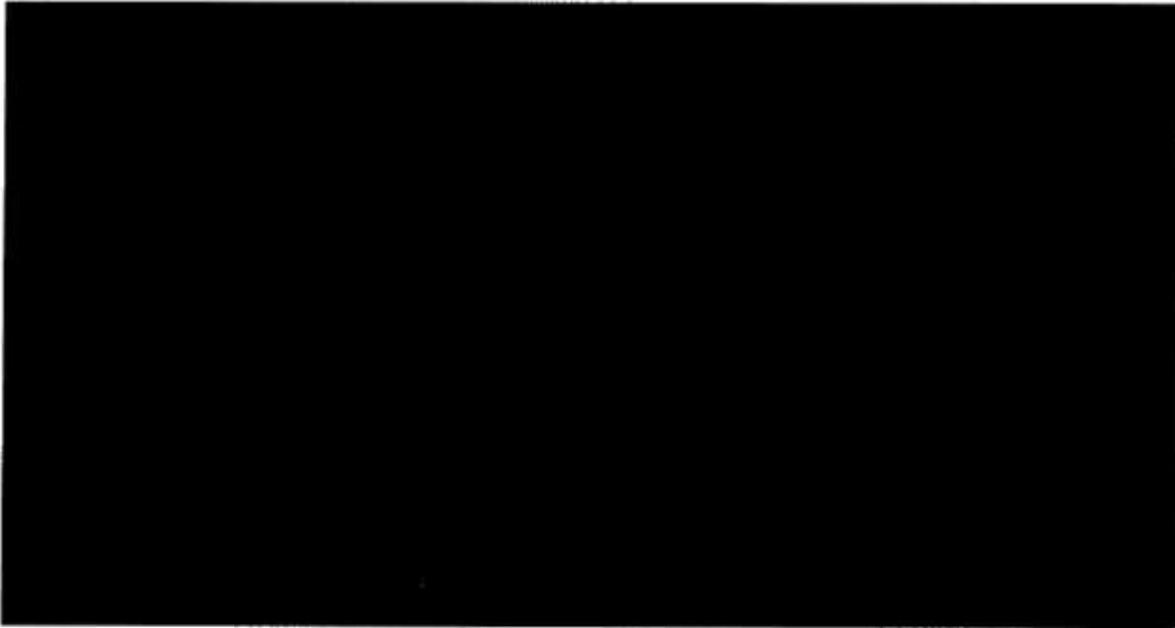

21. When planning for the next collection cycle began in or about November 2008, Mr. Oldham again failed to provide any meaningful design contributions or inspiration. Instead, during a meeting with a senior Old Navy designer, Mr. Oldham delivered what appeared to be paint color swatches from a hardware store. Mr. Oldham's token effort provided no vision, insight or passion. Throughout the collection cycle, Mr. Oldham again failed to meet his obligations to work with the Old Navy creative team, assist the team and guide team members as they developed, modified and finalized the collections.

22. During the next design cycle, which began in or about February 2009, Mr. Oldham continued to have only the most superficial engagement with the Old Navy design team. He arrived for his kickoff meeting with the senior Old Navy designer responsible for its largest apparel line with nothing but a blank sheet of paper. Mr. Oldham failed to present initial creative concepts or direction, to share vision or insight with Old Navy designers, or to make any attempt to motivate or inspire the Old Navy team throughout the collection cycle. Again, he failed to meet his obligations to assist the Old Navy creative team and guide team members as they developed, modified and finalized the collections.

Negotiations Regarding a “Todd Oldham” Brand Line

23. Under Section 5 of the SOW, the parties acknowledged that it was their

A large rectangular area of the page has been completely blacked out, indicating that the original content has been redacted.

24. Old Navy negotiated in good faith with Mr. Oldham toward the objective contemplated by Section 5 of the Scope of Work. Old Navy senior executives, including the President of Old Navy, Tom Wyatt, met, spoke and exchanged emails with Mr. Oldham and his agent in an attempt to develop acceptable terms and conditions.

25. During these negotiations, a number of differences emerged between the parties, including the types of products to be included in the proposed line, the number of stores in which to launch the line, the staffing necessary to support the line, and the timing of any launch. One particularly significant difference involved the timing for the proposed line. Throughout the negotiations, Old Navy repeatedly made clear to Mr. Oldham that Old Navy was prepared to work toward the development and launch of a future TODD OLDHAM brand line, but that in the present economic environment and business circumstances an extensive, near-term launch was not feasible. A second particularly significant difference related to Mr. Oldham's repeated demands for multi-million dollar minimum guaranteed payments, to be paid without regard to the success or failure of the line or its impact, if any, on Old Navy retail sales, and without regard to business conditions. Mr. Oldham's persistently unreasonable demands on this point, and his lack of responsiveness to the economic realities and to Old Navy's business practices and concerns, made it difficult to achieve progress in the negotiations regarding a branded line. Mr. Oldham also failed to prove any specific design detail or agree to comply with Old Navy's copyright ownership policies.

26. Nonetheless, despite Mr. Oldham's consistent refusal to adjust his demands, Old Navy continued to engage in good faith negotiations. On January 8, 2009, Mr. Wyatt, the President of Old Navy, provided Mr. Oldham's agent, Mr. Vayness, with a detailed proposal setting forth key business terms for a proposed TODD OLDHAM branded line (the "January 8 Proposal"). The January 8 Proposal [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Mr. Wyatt requested that Mr. Oldham promptly provide proposals for the “design and aesthetic” of the proposed line.

27. In response, Mr. Oldham renewed his threat of legal action and made a series of outrageous and unreasonable demands. In an email to Mr. Wyatt on January 8, 2009, Mr. Oldham stated:

[REDACTED]

32. Despite Mr. Oldham's unreasonable demands, Old Navy indicated again its

33. Mr. Oldham and his representatives nevertheless continued to make demands that were unacceptable to Old Navy. Mr. Oldham also attempted to end-run the Old Navy negotiators by going "above their heads" to a member of the Board of Directors of Gap, Inc. and made unhelpful and unproductive comments to Old Navy design personnel concerning the negotiation process. Mr. Oldham also continued his threats of legal action if his demands were not met.

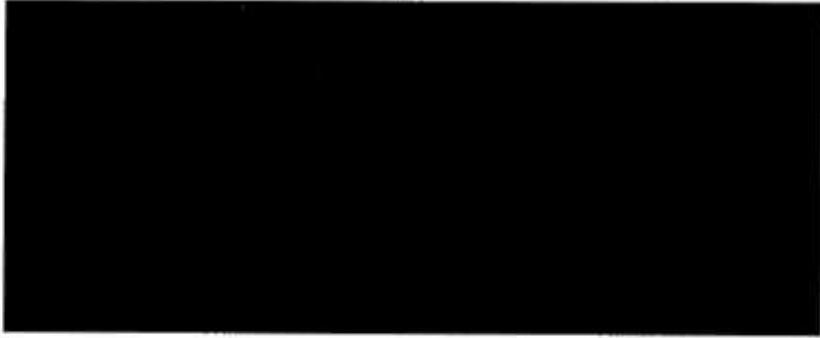

34. On February 2, 2009, Old Navy informed Mr. Oldham that a revised proposal was unacceptable.

35. In a cynical effort to bolster Mr. Oldham's litigation position, later on February 2, 2009, Mr. Oldham's agent purported to represent that Mr. Oldham suddenly was "now prepared to agree" to terms that Old Navy previously suggested in its January 8 Proposal (terms that Mr. Oldham previously had criticized, rejected and threatened to litigate over), although Mr. Oldham still failed to provide any specific design details or agree to Old Navy's copyright ownership policies. Based on the various positions previously taken by Mr. Oldham and the manner in which the negotiations had taken place, Old Navy viewed Mr. Oldham's belated expressions of compromise as unacceptable.

36. On February 17, 2009, L-7 Designs took further action inconsistent with its contractual obligations by filing this baseless lawsuit against Old Navy. In addition to the prior failures by Mr. Oldham and L-7 Designs to meet their obligations under the Agreement, the filing of a lawsuit against Old Navy violated and rendered it impossible for L-7 Designs and Mr. Oldham to perform their contractual obligations, including to "motivate, inspire, coach and share vision" with Old Navy, provide the meaningful input and other contributions to Old Navy required under the Agreement, and to develop and express a creative point of view for Old Navy internally and externally, including in public relations activities.

37. On February 20, 2009, in accordance with paragraph 5 of the Agreement, Old Navy provided L-7 Designs with written notice of termination of the Agreement based on the material breaches of the Agreement by L-7 Designs. Old Navy provided L-7 Designs with full payment pursuant to the Agreement through February 20, 2009.

FIRST COUNTERCLAIM (Breach of Contract)

38. Old Navy repeats and realleges the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 37 of its Counterclaims as if fully set forth herein.

39. Under the Agreement, L-7 Designs committed that Mr. Oldham would

40. L-7 Designs, by and through its representatives Todd Oldham and Todd Oldham Studio, breached its Agreement with Old Navy by neglecting Mr. Oldham's obligations and the obligations of L-7 Designs under the Agreement, including by: (i) failing to present initial creative concepts and direction to the Old Navy design team; (ii) failing to assist and guide the Old Navy design team as it developed, modified, and finalized collections; (iii) limiting involvement with Old Navy to fleeting, episodic and perfunctory encounters; (iv) failing to provide vision, insight or passion; (v) failing to provide any meaningful input on design processes and procedures; and (vi) filing this baseless lawsuit rendering it impossible to perform its contractual obligations.

41. As a result of the breach by L-7 Designs, Old Navy has suffered damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

SECOND COUNTERCLAIM
(Declaratory Judgment)

42. Old Navy repeats and realleges the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 41 of its Counterclaims as if fully set forth herein.

43. In accordance with the Agreement and Section 5 of the SOW, Old Navy negotiated in good faith with L-7 Designs in an attempt to reach agreement on specific terms and conditions related to a potential TODD OLDHAM branded line of products.

44. Despite Old Navy's good faith efforts, the parties were unable to reach agreement on terms. Throughout the negotiations, L-7 Designs and Mr. Oldham on behalf of L-7 Designs made repeated outrageous demands, took wildly shifting positions, repeatedly threatened to file a lawsuit if Old Navy did not capitulate to their demands, and engaged in a series of unreasonable pressure tactics and other bad-faith conduct.

45. An actual controversy exists between Old Navy and L-7 Designs as to whether the parties performed in accordance with the Agreement.

46. Accordingly, Old Navy is entitled to a declaration that: (i) Old Navy acted properly and in accordance with the Agreement (ii) L-7 Designs breached its obligations under the Agreement and (iii) Old Navy is not obligated to launch or enter into an agreement to launch a branded line.

WHEREFORE, Old Navy respectfully requests that the Court enter judgment for Old Navy on its Counterclaims: (a) ordering L-7 Designs to pay for all of Old Navy's legal fees, expenses and other costs associated with the lawsuit filed by L-7 Designs; (b) ordering L-7 Designs to pay such damages as may be determined at trial together with interest and costs; and (c) declaring that Old Navy acted properly and in accordance with the Agreement, that L-7 Designs breached its obligations under the Agreement and that Old Navy is not obligated to launch or enter into an agreement to launch a TODD OLDHAM branded line.
